In modern societies, on the other hand, the division of labor is so distinct and so specialized that the ties among people are now based on the functions they perform for each other. In his view, the modern society is held together by mutual dependence among people, which he called as organic solidarity. Durkheim noted that collective consciousness is likewise present in modern industrial ...

More than crime, modern police forces in the United States emerged as a response to "disorder." What constitutes social and public order depends largely on who is defining those terms, and in the cities of 19th century America they were defined by the mercantile interests, who through taxes and political influence supported the development of bureaucratic policing institutions. These economic ...
