'Honor among thieves' recipe in one sentence: take American declaration of Independence, throw Mossad, CIA, foreign ministries into the mix, marinade with few random unceremonious killings, cook it well in Saddam's totalitarian cruel regime, add America-Israel romance before serving it with a pinch of American nationalism. Far too easy! That's what it was. Dying good men miraculously survive, ruthless bad men conveniently get fooled, untrained, inexperienced agent steals the show ...

Honour Among Thieves is probably the most conceptually ambitious mod I have come across in NWN. Offering moral ambiguity, real choice & consequence as well as imaginative gameplay, it very much feels like the flawed gem of a Troika game to the more regular, polished and streamlined Bioware style modules. In its best moments, I was reminded of noir classics such as Vampire Bloodlines (which is ...

Farewell Friend aka Adieu L'Ami/Honour Among Thieves isn't perfect but it is a neat and entertaining thriller that sees mismatched demobbed French Algerian War veterans Alain Delon and Charles Bronson trapped in the same basement vault, one to return stolen bonds, the other to clean out the two million in wages sitting there over the Christmas weekend. Naturally things aren't quite that simple ...
